Business Spotlight

Schraer Heating & Air Conditioning

Warrenton Area Chamber of Commerce Business of the Year 2021

The company was founded as Scott-Woolf Incorporated when Gary Scott and Billy Woolf went into business in 1993. They started with one stocked truck and a customer base of approximately 300 people. In 1994, they purchased Schraer Heating & Air Conditioning, which had begun operation in 1946 when Omar Schraer began building and installing furnaces. His service area consisted of Warren and Montgomery County. In the 1950's, Mr. Schraer added air conditioning to the services he provided. Gary and Billy have continued Schraer's commitment to provide the most current innovations to their customer by adding high efficiency and Geothermal units to the product mix. Schraer Heating and Air Conditioning's goal is to provide loyal customers with expert heating and air conditioning services in Warren County and surrounding areas through professional commitment, quality workmanship and involvement in the community.

Today, Gary and Billy continue Omar's commitment to providing the most current innovations to their customers, including high efficiency and geothermal systems. From fast repairs to convenient system replacement that fits your schedule, our goal is to provide you with the best customer experience you've ever had. This includes explaining our process from start to finish, so all your questions are answered, and paying attention to even the smallest details.

We hope that we're a heating and cooling company that you'll want to recommend to your neighbors, friends and family. Schraer Heating & Air Conditioning offers a full range of quality heating and air conditioning services for homeowners and business owners, including:

- Furnace repair for electric, gas (natural and LP), oil and boiler systems
- Air conditioning repair
- Heat pump repair
- Furnace, air conditioner and heat pump replacement
- Installation for new construction, including conventional and geothermal systems
- Maintenance programs
- Sheet metal fabrication
- Refrigeration

We want you to be a loyal customer for life. That's why Schraer Heating & Air Conditioning is proud to provide services that include a high level of communication and friendliness and a deep level of respect and understanding.

In June, we started a Facebook project Networking with the Community. Each week we feature a Business in the Community along with an item to Give Away. To be part of the Schraer Heating and Air Conditioning Weekly Giveaway - Donate a small item and your business will be featured on our Facebook page.

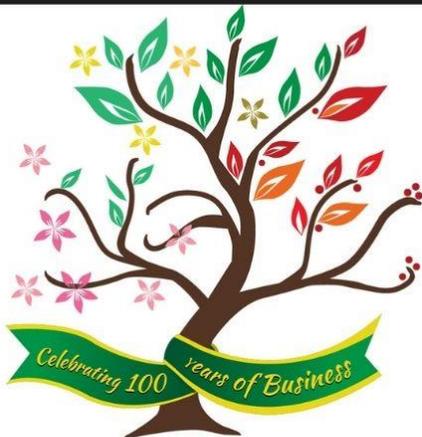

We announce the weekly giveaway item on Mondays at 8 am, tagging your business.

Contest ends on Wednesdays at 5 pm and we will announce winner on Thursdays by 11 am. If your business would like to be part of this project you can contact Bonnie Kelley @636-456-5041 or info@schraerheating.com.

Schraer is unique in the way they give back to their community by offering reasonable pricing never trying to gouge the customer and always contributing to local organizations.

10 Ways To Demonstrate Professional Behavior in the Workplace

By Jennifer Herrity

How you behave at work can affect everything from your relationships with coworkers to finding new opportunities for advancement. Your behavior can bolster your professional reputation and boost your career almost as much as your skills and experience do.

In this article, we list 10 ways to maintain professional behavior in the workplace.

What is professional behavior in the workplace?

Professional behavior in the workplace is a combination of attitude, appearance and manners. It includes the way you speak, look, act and make decisions. The main principles of professional work behavior include:

-Treating your managers, colleagues and clients with respect--Projecting a positive attitude--Being polite--Showing good judgment--Being ethical--Dressing appropriately

Employees who show professionalism at work are often productive, motivated and perform at a high level. Colleagues and clients enjoy working with them, and they might transition into leadership roles. Some companies have codes of professional conduct that include rules about dress and behavior to help guide employees.

10 ways to maintain professional behavior in the workplace

If you want to improve your performance at work and your chances of career success, consider these professional behaviors that make good impressions on coworkers and employers:

1. Arrive on time

Punctuality shows your coworkers that you are reliable, care about your work and value their time. Take steps to ensure you're on time for work each day, such as setting alarms and using calendar reminders for meetings and conferences. Aim to arrive a few minutes early so if you do encounter traffic during your commute or need to answer an urgent email before a meeting, you can stay on schedule.

Also, make sure you follow your company's break schedule. If employees receive an hour for lunch and 15 minutes for breaks, return to work within those limits.

2. Follow your company's dress code

Regardless of whether your company has a strict dress code, allows casual attire or you work from home, maintain a clean and neat appearance that makes a positive impression on clients and coworkers. Review company guidelines about attire, and avoid items such as wrinkled or poorly fitting clothes, ripped jeans, tank tops and flip-flops. Choose something that looks professional because you represent the company.

3. Communicate respectfully

When you are at work, use clean language even during casual conversations and emails. Avoid gossiping, talking about sensitive subjects and sharing overly personal information with coworkers. If you do need to confide in a colleague, do it in a private space where customers or managers cannot hear you.

During meetings and discussions, speak clearly and courteously so people can understand you. Listen to your colleagues when they share ideas and acknowledge the things they say even if you disagree. Your tone and language are equally important when communicating through email. Keep emails professional because they become long-term records of conversations.

4. Be honest

Integrity in the workplace can lead to positive relationships. Coworkers who trust each other are often productive and work well as a team. Be honest if you need personal time off from work or could use an extra few days to complete a project. Keep company and client information confidential. If you see dishonest behavior in the workplace, report it to your manager.

5. Have a positive attitude

People enjoy working with colleagues who are upbeat and optimistic. If you show up to work motivated and with a good attitude, your colleagues might be likely to display similar behaviors, which can improve overall office morale. If you encounter challenges at work, try to solve them rather than complain about them. Give your colleagues positive feedback and encouragement on projects. Compliment the people around you on their personal and professional achievements.

6. Take responsibility

Respected professionals set examples by taking responsibility for their actions. If you make a mistake, always admit it and then take steps to correct it or prevent it from happening again. Avoid blaming others, even if they contributed to an issue. Managers appreciate employees who acknowledge failed ideas, missed deadlines or wrong decisions, apologize and try to resolve them. If you realize you need help completing a project or making a big decision, ask for it.

7. Avoid social media

Even if your job involves posting on social media sites and monitoring company platforms, avoid checking your personal accounts during working hours. If a colleague or manager notices that you are on social media during the day, they might question your productivity. Instead, wait until your lunch break to check social media updates and turn off social media notifications so you won't be distracted or distract others who work near you.

8. Help others

Offer to help your colleagues when they appear overwhelmed by tasks or are trying to solve challenging issues. Ask if they want your opinion about an idea or your help completing a project, and respect their response. When you support your colleagues and work together as a team, you can elevate the entire department.

Managers also notice employees who are supportive team members and might consider them for leadership roles.

9. Act ethically

Workplace ethics involve choosing between right and wrong and maintaining strong morals. Act ethically by:

Understanding and following company rules and policies--Reporting violations, questionable behavior, safety concerns or suspicious actions--Removing personal bias and judgment from your decisions and interactions--Being accountable and taking responsibility for your actions--Asking for help in difficult situations--When you act ethically, you are more likely to make good decisions that benefit your entire team.

10. Be reliable

Show your colleagues and manager that they can rely on you to meet deadlines, do quality work and show up to meetings on time. When someone asks you to complete a task, commit to doing it well and finishing it on time. Prepare for meetings by reviewing agendas and bringing notes and discussion points. If your manager knows they can depend on you to do high-quality, timely work, they might give you more responsibilities and independence.

A TIME TO SHOW YOU CARE!

Compass Health Network's annual Season of Giving program collects toys and monetary donations to bring joy to families that are struggling in your community during the holiday season.

The Event: A store like environment is created where parents and/or guardians are invited to make gift selections for their children. Their selected items are gift wrapped and concealed in a large bag to avoid spoiling any surprises. While the adults are "shopping", children are kept busy creating holiday themed crafts.

Season of Giving Goal: Serve 200 children in need of holiday support.

Two ways to help:

- 1 Make a financial donation at: compasshealthnetwork.org/donate or scan the QR code using your mobile device.
- 2 Drop off an unwrapped toy at participating locations:

Holidays can be a stressful time for families. Season of Giving is one small way to remove stress and offer joy! Please consider being a part of the effort...make a donation, drop off a toy, involve your work friends, family, and neighbors! Deadline for donations: December 1, 2022.
